

THE SOCIETY OF THE KNIGHTS OF THE CAMPANILE

Fellow Knights,

College's disciplinary investigation into claims made by the University Times has now ended with the Junior Dean concluding "I have found only that an unauthorized party was convened in your apartment on 27th February."

So there you have it: the student Knights had a party.

As you can imagine it has been distressing for the student Knights, and particularly President Ben Arrowsmith, to have been the subject these past weeks not only of the University Times' irresponsible and sensationalist claims of 'hazing' but also of the ludicrous claims made by Editor Eleanor O'Mahony of "...appalling ritual humiliation practices."

Ben Arrowsmith has taken responsibility for his actions. He has accepted that "an unauthorised party was convened" in his rooms and has apologised to the Junior Dean for his indiscretion. It remains to be seen if the University Times will take responsibility for its actions.

College's disciplinary investigation having found their wild claims lacking foundation, the University Times should now publish a retraction of their unsubstantiated claims and an apology for their trespass, invasion of privacy, and bugging.

Peter Ledbetter
